Walteria Queen To Be Crowned At Civic Dance

All Torrance teen-agers have been invited to attend a Coronation Ball at the Civic Auditorium tomorrow evening, at which pretty Ella Mae McLeod 17, will be crowned Queen of the Walteria-Pacific Hills area.

Miss McLeod won the honor in a queen contest sponsored last week by the Pacific Hills Homeowners Association.

Mayor Nick Drale of Torrance will escort the winners up the central aisle at 9:30 p.m. and will award Miss McLeod her prizes, which include a trophy, a radio, a formal gown, and a corsage.

Second place winner Pat Wingard, 16, will receive a skirt and third place Betty Eakins 17, a blouse.

Orchestra To Play
 Nat Lewis and his Orchestra will provide music for the ball. He played for a recent Pacific Hills dance and was hailed as a great success, according to Jim Minter, queen contest chairman.

The dance is especially for teen-agers. Adults will be admitted to watch, but only teen-agers may dance, Minter stated.

The dance is open to all teen-agers and not just those from the Walteria-Pacific Hills area he added. Free cookies will be served and soft-drinks will be available.

The queen and her escort will perform the first dance alone after which the dance will officially begin.

Disregards Handicap Sightless Don Miller Proceeds With Unique Career with Zest

By Agnes Bolter

He can't see a hand in front of his face, but he's got more foresight than many men with 20/20 vision.

Don Miller, blind since he was two years old after an attack of measles, came to Torrance from Cleveland, Ohio, a year ago because "it's a growing community and I felt there were more opportunities here." The same vision prompting his own move has led to his establishing a unique kind of service for Torrance merchants which he hopes to extend through Lomita, Harbor City, and the beach cities.

It's called the South Bay Credit Clearance Association, and its basic aim is to give merchants a prompt credit check of anyone requesting to open a charge account.

The system works this way. Each member of the Association (there are now about 25) gives his basic file of persons with active charge accounts or who have been issued credit at some time to Miller. Then when a merchant gets a request for credit, he can call the Association, which will then check the applicant's credit for him.

The Ultimate Goal
 At least, that's the ultimate goal Miller has in mind. At present, service is limited to a simple credit check, whereby the Association can give the inquirer a record of where the applicant has established credit, whether good or bad.

Ultimately Miller also desires to employ a collector for the Association. Such an employee would be responsible for collecting bad debts for the various members of the group.

Many new businesses, once they are organized, gain size and strength like the proverbial snowball, and "I hope it's that way with us," Miller said. "This idea has been kicked around Torrance for about two years that I know of, but no one has wanted to work to get independent merchants together."

"Suggested by businessmen themselves, it's really a worthwhile project, but in order to give the maximum service we need everyone who issues credit as a member. As we gain members, so our service will increase."

The credit business is a far cry from Miller's original ambition which was to be a journalist. But in 1949, when he graduated from Western Reserve University in Ohio, jobs in the field were pretty hard to get, mostly because the industry was still re-absorbing returned vets.

Opportunity came knocking when one of the "big wheels" at a leading national magazine in New York offered him a feature writing job—but Miller, newly-married, decided against accepting the job.

"It's a rough field at best," he said, "and my wife and I decided keeping the security of my insurance position in Ohio was better than risking the unknown quantity in New York. You know the old saying, 'a bird in hand is worth two in a bush.'"

"Sometimes now I wonder if I turned in the right direction or not, if I had been single, I might have gone, but then again, I think it's a mistake to wish 'if I had it to do over again.' Circumstances being equal, most people would do exactly the same a second time."

Likes His Work
 Miller likes his work here and believes that "once the fight is over and the thing is established, it'll be a nice berth." He used to keep up his literary inclination, dabbling in short stories, but "as I never got the encouragement of being paid for my writing I gave it up. No one appreciated me so I just quit. I showed them," he laughed.

Now his main activity during leisure hours is reading "anything and everything." He also likes horseback riding and swimming in the ocean, a novel experience for one raised inland.

He's taking a course in business law at El Camino College this summer "for my own edification" and work for his master's degree. He plans to attend Long Beach State College in the fall "for my own satisfaction."

For Miller's a great believer in the benefits of college education. "Actually, it's value lies in broadening the individual's outlook," he said. "College teaches you a little about a lot of things which I think is better than knowing a lot about just one thing."

Seaside Heights Huck Finn Day Hailed Success For 250 Kids

By SUE BURK FR 5-4519

BOY, did you ever see such weather? Hot as a depot stove. At least one couple hasn't minded these hot days and that is Mr. and Mrs. Tom Clark and their young son, David. Jim and Barbara enjoyed a backyard Bar-B-Q and dancing to recordings of all kinds on this last Monday evening. Yes, even David was dancing; as any child will. The records were really jazzy and the Bar-B-Q smelled good even way down on this end of the street.

The Jim McClune family of Doris Way spent Sunday in San Fernando Valley and were wishing all that time that they were back in the cool breezes that drift in from the ocean every once in a while around Seaside.

The Oklahoma Picnic will be held in Banning Park on Sunday, the 25th of July. Anyone from Oklahoma could have just gobs of fun and entertainment at this get-together. Mrs. McClune asked me to pass the word that she and hubby would like to know anyone from New York, Okla.

Company last week for Beverly Tomelson, of 5323 Doris Way, was mother and two granddaughters from Los Angeles.

Seaside School reports a very successful Huck Finn day with close to 250 students participating, according to Mr. Baratto, teacher. Timmy Roettger won the race for eating the mostest the fastest. The children will present a rhythm Assembly in the auditorium and on the patio on Friday from 9:45 a.m. to 10:15 a.m.

Fat Brady of Doris Way won a Westinghouse Roaster Oven in the Skylark Bread contest this last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burk and family spent this last Monday visiting in Los Angeles and Santa Monica.

Excuse me . . . the item last week about the Archibalds taking parents back east. I seemed to get my parents mixed up; it was the Archibald parents. Forgive me. I know the Bradys must have wondered where they got an extra set of folks.

Little Carolee Hayes was guest for a week in grandmother Aethea Milson's home on Bindevald Rd. Carolee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Hayes of 604 North Maple Dr., in Beverly Hills. The Milsons recently returned from vacationing for two weeks in Beverly Hills.

Mrs. Floyd Holstin and children have just returned from a week-end in Lancaster, Calif.

Sailor Guilty of Drunken Driving

Gerald Glen Smith, 30, driver of the car which injured Traffic Officer A. L. Jackson, pleaded guilty in South Bay Municipal Court to charges of drunken driving, and was fined $150 or 30 days in the County Jail, with driving privileges suspended for 90 days.

Sentence was suspended for two weeks to allow Smith time to raise the money. Charges were reduced to drunken driving, a misdemeanor, rather than those originally filed, drunken driving involving an injury, a felony.

Officer Jackson was struck by the car and carried 52 feet. He was standing by the side of Crenshaw Blvd., near Dominguez St. He suffered a skull fracture, a broken leg, and other injuries. He is recovering at Torrance Municipal Hospital.

Smith's companion in the car, Robert Lee Cole, 26, also a sailor, was fined $25 for drunkenness.
